Los Angeles Trade Tech College (LATTC) is seeking to hire a president who is student-centered, equity minded, culturally competent, and community oriented.

Los Angeles Trade Tech College is one of the nine colleges comprising the Los Angeles Community College District (LACCD). Headed by a Chancellor and governed by an elected Board of Trustees, the Los Angeles Community College District is one of the nation’s largest community college districts serving the residents of more than 36 cities and communities in an almost 900-square mile area within Los Angeles County. An average of about 230,000 full- and part-time students per year are educated at LACCD, and LACCD is proud to be the leading educator of Latino and African American students in California. LACCD educates nearly twice as many Latino and African American students as all of the University of California campuses combined. Additionally, the District serves a substantial population of first-generation students, AB540 and undocumented students, students with disabilities, students with justice-system involvement, LGBTQ+ community, former foster care students and students who are either currently active in the military or military veterans, all of whom further enrich our vibrant community. LACCD is also a founding member of the California Community College Equity Leadership Alliance. Through this Alliance, the LACCD will deploy a framework for racial equity and social justice to make structural and permanent change to root out the ill effects of racism and bias from the classrooms and workplace and move forward towards a more socially and racially just academic environment.

Los Angeles Trade-Technical College is the oldest of the nine colleges within the Los Angeles Community College District, with the highest concentration of Career Technical Education (CTE) programs in California. The President provides executive leadership and advocacy for the college, is responsible and directly accountable for all college operations, and is a district team member on the Chancellor’s cabinet. The successful candidate will possess a thorough understanding of the primary mission of the community college, have a strong grounding in workforce education, and an awareness of the interdependence between career-technical disciplines and transfer education. The candidate must have an unwavering commitment to access, equity, inclusion and social justice and thoroughly understand the role of an urban community college and the dynamics within the multi-cultural, multi-tiered socio-economic community it serves. The college is seeking a visionary and innovative president willing to make a strong commitment to the college and communities served by LATTC.

College Mission
Los Angeles Trade Technical College advances communities through pathways to academic, career, and transfer success that empower students to achieve career technical certificates, associate degrees, transfer, and employment.

History of the College
LATTC has a long and proud history of providing the highest quality Career Technical and academic programs to students throughout the region. The college has been serving the Los Angeles community for over ninety years. In response to the needs of industry to provide post-secondary vocational training, the college began in 1925 by offering a course in power sewing at a manufacturing plant. This led to the development of the Frank Wiggins Trade School, named after a chamber of commerce member who led in promoting the development of the Los Angeles area workforce. The school relocated to a new building on the corner of Venice Boulevard and Olive Street in 1926, and in the inter-war period, gained a reputation for excellence through the success of its graduates in industrial careers and in the dedication of its faculty and staff. During World War II, the college was extensively involved in labor force training in support of the federal War Production Program. The end of the war and the return of the economy to civilian purposes, together with the infusion of federal funds for training veterans, led to an expanded demand for education and training at the college. Accordingly, state-required academic subjects for the associate degree were added to the curricula, and in 1949, the college became Los Angeles Trade-Technical College, offering the associate degree in vocational disciplines. LATTC moved to its current location in 1957. In 1966, Metropolitan College, which had a strong business program, merged with Los Angeles Trade-Technical College, resulting in a broadening of course offerings. In 1969, LATTC joined the then newly formed Los Angeles Community College District (LACCD).

About the College
Currently, LATTC occupies a 25-acre site at the corner of Washington Boulevard and Grand Avenue near the central business district of Los Angeles. This central location is easily accessible via the freeway systems of Southern California and via public transportation, including the A Line and E Line portions of the Metro Rail system. LATTC is unique in that approximately two-thirds of the instructional facilities are devoted to career-technical education.

With a long history deeply rooted in preparing students for trade and technical careers, LATTC is the only community college in California that dedicates the majority of its institutional resources to career-technical education (CTE). The college recognizes its responsibility to provide general education, transfer, and workforce training to the community at large. The college advances state, regional, and local economic growth, and global competitiveness, through education, training, and services that contribute to workforce improvement. The college commits to providing educational and cultural activities that contribute to the general well-being of the community it serves.

LATTC offers 63 Associate Degrees, 18 Associate Degrees for Transfer, and 106 credit and non-credit certificate programs. Programs and services are provided by approximately 175 full-time faculty, 300 adjunct faculty, 225 classified staff members, and 15 administrators. The college serves approximately 12,000 students per semester who are highly diverse and reflect the surrounding communities.

Desirable Qualities
The Chancellor and the Search Committee will evaluate potential candidates for the Presidency of LATTC based on the following desirable qualities identified by faculty, staff, and students.

Student Access, Success, and Equity
1. A president who is passionate about serving students, who has authentic concern for students, and will foster a positive and safe campus environment that supports teaching and learning.
2. A president who is committed to closing equity gaps in student outcomes and mobilizing the college to improve student retention, success, and completion.
3. A president who has experience working with CTE programs, Guided Pathways, and other student success initiatives as a means to helping students achieve social and economic mobility.
4. A president who embraces the rich diversity of the LATTC community and promotes an inclusive environment for all.

Collaboration
1. A president who is committed to collegial consultation/participatory governance and has the ability to build consensus with a collaborative decision-making leadership style that inspires and empowers others to provide input, and demonstrates accountability for decisions.
2. A president who demonstrates high respect for the work of all faculty, staff, and administrators and the value each brings to the effectiveness and improvement of the institution and the success of students.
3. A president who is highly responsive and supports a partnership between student government, instruction, student services and administrative services.
4. A president who has a strong record of integrity and an ability to build trust in order to work effectively with faculty, staff, and administrators in the implementation of Collective Bargaining Agreements.
5. A president who empowers student voices and participation in campus-wide decision making.
Financial and Operational Ability
1. A president who understands statewide and district systems for funding to maximize all college opportunities, including but not limited to, the Student-Centered Funding Formula, and Student Equity and Achievement.
2. A president who can provide leadership to the college with careful fiscal management, and who will protect, expand and leverage the college’s fiscal resources by proactively advocating for state, federal and grant funding to benefit students and the campus.
3. A president who can demonstrate evidence of successful oversight of construction, facilities, and existing bond projects for the college.
4. A president who can provide leadership and oversight in establishing, improving and maintaining a technology rich learning and operational environment aligned with evolving industry standards.
5. A president committed to campus safety, cleanliness, and emergency preparedness.
6. A president who can demonstrate fiscal prudence and accountability.
7. A president who can attract private, public, and philanthropic resources to the college.

Strategic Thinking and Innovation
1. A president who is future-focused and will make significant data-informed decisions and inspire and support innovation.
2. A president who will provide strong leadership and will challenge the existing norms and procedures that may inhibit student success and institutional effectiveness.
3. A president who advocates for and supports existing successful innovations that foster student success and institutional effectiveness.
4. A president who will provide strong support for open educational resources, and online/hybrid learning modalities and other innovations that support student access, completion and success.

Communicates Effectively
1. A president who is transparent and communicates in a timely and effective manner with faculty, staff, students, industry and community partners.
2. A president who listens actively, collaboratively and thoughtfully and is resilient, empathetic and visible.
3. A president who communicates college successes and challenges to the community, the LACCD Board, the state, the nation, and is an advocate for the college.

Develops Effective Partnerships
1. A president who can build mutually beneficial partnerships with K-12 school districts and baccalaureate granting institutions to expand dual enrollment, the Los Angeles College Promise, online education, adult education, non-credit education and university transfer.
2. A president who develops and enhances partnerships with community and civic organizations; business, industry and labor partners; economic and workforce development entities and the surrounding community; e.g., South Los Angeles Transit Empowerment Zone (SLATE-Z) partners, Los Angeles Regional Consortium, and others.

3. A president who promotes effective outreach and recruitment strategies, public relations, college branding and marketing initiatives.

4. A president who provides oversight to the College Foundation to ensure that fiduciary integrity is maintained to enable the Foundation to address the special needs of a premier workforce development program.

5. A president who will foster existing relationships, develop new relationships and increase economic development throughout the region.

Personal and Professional Characteristics

The ideal candidate will be:

1. A visionary leader committed to student success, the development of quality educational programs, and institutional improvement.

2. Trustworthy and noted for integrity and honesty in personal and professional interactions.

3. A role model and advocate for students, staff, and the community with a commitment to diversity.

4. A leader with significant executive experience in career technical education (CTE) and workforce development.

5. Able to demonstrate at least three (3) years of senior leadership experience, preferably in an accredited institution of higher learning.

6. Have earned a doctorate from an accredited institution.

The President will be an outstanding leader with the ability to demonstrate:

1. An understanding of the mission, history and vision of Los Angeles Trade Tech College.

2. Effective communication skills, strategic planning and organizational skills.

3. An open and fair management style that empowers others and promotes teambuilding, trust, and collegiality.

4. A leader who will galvanize all constituents, uplift employees, build consensus and continuously keep students at the center of all decisions.

5. An advocate for participatory governance, support for collaborative decision-making, and the ability to forge consensus on difficult issues.

6. Skill in the development and management of resources in a challenging fiscal climate while maintaining the integrity of the college’s programs and academic rigor.

7. The management of a complex budget that includes resource development and private fundraising.

8. Experience in the development of external and auxiliary fundraising organizations which support the mission of the college.

9. A collaborative style that is highly visible on campus and creates a positive interactive relationship with students, faculty, staff, and administrators.
Salary and Benefits
